Shooting Gallery Presents:
*Ritual: New Works by Charmaine Olivia

The Shooting Gallery is pleased to present Ritual: New Works by Charmaine Olivia. Artist Charmaine Olivia has long explored the female form through fantasy, surrealistic imagery, juxtaposed with touches of absolute realism. In her first ever solo show in San Francisco, Ritual explores the themes of magic and earth energies within a series of imagined females from a mythology of the artist's own creation. The gallery will be transformed into a temple of altars for each of Olivia's demigods; each surrounded by installations of magical items, and other smaller artworks that pay homage to the central female. The opening reception for Ritual will be held at The Shooting Gallery on Saturday, January 14, 2012 from 7-11pm. The exhibit will be on display through February 4, 2012 and is free and open to the public.

In preparation for Ritual, Olivia has investigated mankind's past cultural religious beliefs, and has incorporated everything from astrological symbolism to druid magic into her work. Her females represent power and strength within their particular realm of existence, similar to the gods of early polytheistic Greece. Translucent skin reveals skeletal forms in some, while waves of hair reveal bewitching flowers on others. Ritual aims to take the viewer on a journey through the Olivia's own mythology, while traversing emotions that reside deep within our own subconscious.

Olivia's luminous portraits are almost haunting in their beauty. Adorned with decorative bones, flowers, and feathers, Olivia's figures appear regal, embodying a bold and fearless grace. With untamed hair and sensual poses, there is a wildness to these beauties that seems caged in. The lush surface of the oil-painted canvases seems like a thin barrier between us and the striking women at their center.

Undeniably feminine, the works present a balance of delicacy and strength. In "Cora" a light-haired figure gazes directly at the viewer through heavy-lidded eyes. Positioned at a three quarter angle, the young woman looks out at us with a turned head and one hand wrapped around the graceful arch of her throat, a pose that seems both powerful and oddly vulnerable. The portraits comprising Ritual are made even more bewitching by the altar-like installations set up around them. Specific to each individual painting, the altars are set with various frames, trinkets and bottles, creating a sense of sacredness and ceremony.

The Mission based artist is a standout in the San Francisco art community, and with a fan base that already covers the globe, it is clear that her work is popular amongst the masses. The 23 year old self-taught artist has already created a body of imagery that has caught the eye of Lady Gaga, Urban Outfitters, and Volcom... and she shows no signs of slowing down. Her females are meticulously rendered, juxtaposed with just enough looseness in her paint to add increased interest. Olivia's work seems to evolve right before us, with each body of work incorporating new techniques and subject matter."

The Shooting Gallery opened its doors in 2003 to the historic Tenderloin district of San Francisco; known for its lively street culture. Growing up in Southern California gave owner and curator, Justin Giarla, a love for everything lowbrow: pop art, street art, outsider art, punk rock album art, comic book art, surf/skate art and hot rod culture. Giarla recognizes how important it is to provide lowbrow artists with a platform for their work, which is exactly what Shooting Gallery has done for nearly a decade.
